seminar paper from the year 2008 in the subject ethnology cultural anthropology grade 75 procent nelson mandela metropolitan university school of governmental and social sciences course seminar applied anthropology language english abstract as anthropologists we want to make a difference in our world intercultural training provides us with that opportunity ojile 1986 48 to make a difference includes the issue of change which is essential to the discipline of applied anthropology training in cross cultural interaction and behaviour forms part of communication constitutes intercultural communication therefore a part of the academic discipline of applied anthropology this paper tries to further investigate the correlations between these two academic fields since one of the most obvious developments in contemporary society is that the world is continuously growing closer and closer people get to meet and communicate that would have never met a few hundred years ago objects customs and information get accessible that open up new worlds and horizons for any individual as innovative opportunities arise with a closer interlinked worldwide society also problems occur people with different attitudes perceptions worldviews and ideas are confronted with each other and are being forced to communicate this is where the discipline of intercultural communication comes in to inquire clarify and explain the newly appeared circumstances but is this concrete facilitation part of the larger context of applied anthropology as the author wants to further investigate this issue she draws first on the definitions of the most important two terms to afterwards clarify the specific role expected of an applied anthropologist a case study is used to relate this theoretical matter to a concrete situation the example of cross cultural training is employed as a practical and functional aspect of intercultural communication this is followed by an overall evaluation in which the case study as well as the theoretical discussion are combined to answer the presented question the conclusion infers the whole topic and tries to give an outlook on future development recent events have highlighted once again the global interconnectedness of nations and people and underscored the need for intercultural communication knowledge and skills for example the worldwide spread of the covid 19 virus disrupted the movement of people and goods and caused many countries to tighten their borders the european union close d off a region encompassing at least 26 countries and more than 400 million people and heightened intercultural tensions as leaders of the two most powerful countries china and the united states traded insults and blamed each other for the social and economic devastation we start with this focus on the coronavirus as you may have been impacted by it your university or college may have moved classes online in the spring of 2020 and you may know someone who has contracted it our cultures shape how we respond to these crisis situations do we follow the directives of the government officials or do we do what we want do we think about others or is it everyone for him herself after being asked to stay home and avoid contact with others katie williams tweeted i just went to a crowded red robin it was delicious and i took my sweet time eating my meal because this is america and i ll do what i want 2 in contrast south koreans and chinese tended to follow their governments instructions implemented by location tracking that measured and enforced stay at home directives do these cultural differences help explain why some countries experienced more fatalities and infections from the virus than others as we work our way through this pandemic and the many more that will follow over the course of your lifetime think about how cultural differences influence how different cultures respond to these crises the virus has also accelerated call for reducing globalization although the united states has already withdrawn from some trade agreements and renegotiated others the need for medical equipment intensified calls for more manufacturing in the u s what will happen to globalization will we move more toward closing borders or will we reach out and be more engaged with the world natural disasters may also affect intercultural communication climate change may bring about significant changes that require us to work with others around the world droughts earthquakes hurricanes typhoons tsunamis and other natural disasters may increase the need for intercultural cooperation to help those in need social media presents other intercultural challenges the 2020 video of another unarmed black man george floyd killed by a white minneapolis policeman went viral leading to days of national and worldwide protests against racial inequality and some hope for change on the other hand social media have also been used to foment division and dissension thus our use of social media can build bridges to other cultures or reinforce walls between them how can we use our intercultural skills to help enrich our lives and the lives of those around us as the world changes how important is it for us to understand the past should we focus on culture specific information or should we strive to develop more universal rules how can anyone understand every culture around the world or every language we wrote this book to shed light on these and many other questions about intercultural communication as in our earlier books we have tried to use information from a variety of approaches drawing from social psychological approaches as well as from ethnographic studies and more recent critical media studies however the emphasis in this book is on the practical experiential nature of intercultural communication we still acknowledge that there are no easy answers to many intercultural situations however we attempt to give solid practical guidelines while noting the complexity of the task facing the student of intercultural communication stevis gredneff m hyperlink nytimes com by richard perez pena pérez peña r 2020 march 17 europe barricaded borders to slow coronavirus nytimes com 2020 03 17 world europe eu closes borders virus html white m d 2020 march 15 individualism doesn t justify endangering the lives of others psychologytoday com us blog maybe its just me 202003 individualism doesnt justify endangering the lives others
